

MICHAEL STROKA

Michael Stroka is an ardent student of politics. When questioned about whether actors have the right to declare themselves politically, Mike answered that it's everyone's duty to express his opinion—and that, if an actor can help a political candidate, he should expend his energy and do so. Mike can argue politics for hours. He can, in fact, speak amazingly well on almost every subject imaginable. He loves to talk, especially over a cozy glass of some refreshment. Mike is still a bachelor, and has very strong ideas about the type of girl who will become his wife. He wants someone who is bright and can speak animatedly and fairly knowledgeably about many matters.

JONATHAN FRID

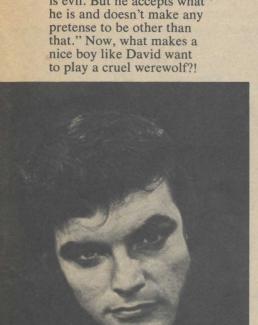

Jonathan Frid waited 20 years for fame, but the wait was well worthwhile. Today Frid has become a pop idol to millions of housewives, teenagers and businessmen, who sneak away from their desks to catch his activities on Dark Shadows. Jonathan has adjusted very well to his enormous fame. He's an amiable fellow who likes almost everything—everything except antiques! Frid, you see, is not one of these overly-cautious people, and he feels very uncomfortable being around priceless pieces which are exceedingly fragile. Must be the agitated vampire in him!

MEET THE DARK SHADOWS CAST

DAVID SELBY

David Selby has always had a secret yearning to play the villain—but somehow always got cast as the good guy! That's why he was so happy to be offered the role of evil Quentin Collins. David says about his role, "Quentin is evil. But he accepts what he is and doesn't make any pretense to be other than that." Now, what makes a nice boy like David want ALEXANDRA MOLTKE Alexandra Moltke was born in Sweden at the beginning of W. W. II—and came to the United States smuggled in a laundry basket! After a start like that, it wasn't surprising that Alexandra's life would take an exciting turn. Her bit of professional excitement came during her acting debut-when she leaned to a side—and was an airplane.

LARA PARKER

Lara Parker is beautiful and blonde—but she's far from dumb. Lara has a degree in philosophy from the University of Iowa, and an overriding love for books and learning. Everything, in fact, that we know about Lara contradicts the surprising truth about her life—instead of choosing to live in a sophisticated city, Lara adores life on a farm!

ROGER DAVIS

Roger Davis just doesn't make sense. Each time you learn something new about him, you think, oh yes, now I understand. But the problem is that you keep right on learning different things about Roger—until you're terribly confused. What can you make of a man who once was an English professor, who now lives in the hippie East Village, and who belongs to the socially elite N.Y. Athletic Club? Very puzzling.

KATHRYN LEIGH SCOTT Kathryn Leigh Scott is not your usual struggling young actressshe's a young lady of royal descent! Kathryn was born in Minn. to Norweigan parents who still maintain an ancestral estate in their native Norway. Kathryn can trace her family lineage back 500 years to the first familial rulers. But she has never been aloof or snobbish in her own views. One of Kathryn's greatest pleasures is designing and sewing her own clothes.

HUMBERT ASTREDO Humbert Astredo lives a normal life in a normal house with a normal child. But, like the warlock he plays on the show, Humbert really wants to be different. His latest whim is the desire to move into his very own houseboat. That he feels, would be a place befitting a warlock!

LOUIS EDMONDS

If you were Louis Edmonds, you'd probably be out playing Hamlet or at least a Tennessee Williams protagonist. But Louis likes his Dark Shadows role as a very welcome relief from the heavy, meaty roles that he's been used to playing. Louis has one of the best classical backgrounds of any of the Shadows cast. What makes him so happy with his campy role? Perhaps it gives him a chance to be a bit of a ham. And perhaps he enjoys that luxury.

JOAN BENNETT

Despite the fact that Joan Bennett's career started in 1929, Joan is one of the most stunningly beautiful women on TV today. Although she is a grandmother, Joan definitely does not fit into the stereotype of knitted shawls and rocking chairs. Joan is proud of her energy and glowing face, and she is a delight to watch. Her grandchildren don't call her grandma—they all call her sweetie, which does sum up what Joan Bennett is about.

DAVID HENESY

David Henesy is 13, but you'd never know it-he seems more like 23. David has been acting since he was 4, so he had to grow up quicker than most children. He loves math and science, wants to be a doctor.
